

Project Definition

This will be a social study project that refers to patterned social arrangements which form the society as a whole; and which, to some degree, determine the actions of the individuals socialized into that structure.

Objectives & Goals

The goal is to analyse the way a society's norms and ethics shape the behaviour and morality of individuals within the social system. Mainly it is about how a person's understanding of "the acceptable behaviour" is shaped through social interactions.

The objective is to execute the project with various social groups and classes and overall come to a realization of how the sum of their cultures and backgrounds define the rules for appropriate and inappropriate values, beliefs, attitudes and behaviours for an individual.

Target audience / User

The projects concentrates on the combined outcome of the enforced norms by a large number of people with different cultures and classes. So as a matter of fact, there is no particular target audience.

Background information

With this project,

1. In the short-run we will be able to see the attributes of the society we live in, that being the behaviours or actions the majority believe within our society to be acceptable and vice-versa.
 2. In the long run, if the project could take place in different cultures, social groups or social classes, we will be able to compare the datas that are collected and analyze the similarities and differences of their own understanding of norms and morality.
- In the end, understanding and knowing the generalized information on specific groups and classes' would help a person to know the way to behave in those societies.

My biggest challenge is that without acquiring information about a large range of societies, the outcome would not be totally satisfying. But nevertheless, we will be able to see how our society's norms are structured now that there are a lot of mixed classes, groups and cultures live within. But again if the people that will participate will be from a specific group, then we will only be able to analyze that groups enforcements on individuals.
